American Red Cross and Jewish Relief Like Angels of Mercy.

STILL NEED OF HELP

Jews and Christians Alike Share in Relief Extended to Stricken People.

By CAPT. FREDERICK G. JOHN-SON.

of the American Red Cross commission to Poland.)

The immediate future of Poland's starving population depends directly on the interest and help of outside nations until national conditions can be improved materially. Poland is doing all that it can for her people, but her present resources do not begin to meet the need. Until the new money gets on her feet, it is the solemn obligation of American relief organizations to keep up their spiritual efforts without relaxation.

I have visited desolate communities in the department of the east, that vast strength of barren country being but of the river Dniester, whose people were literally saved from extinction through the efforts of these relief organizations. The amount of humanitarian good that American effort and American money can do in Poland is limited only by the extent of American generosity. There seems no limit to the work to be covered.

In Novogrodek, for instance, that perhaps harder hit by famine and want than any other single community in the department of the east, the combined efforts of the American relief administration, the American Red Cross and the American Jewish relief agencies resulted not only in the distribution of a vast amount of purely emergency relief in the form of food and clothing, but also in the establishment of a number of permanent institutions that were vitally needed.

Before the Americans got to Novogrodek the people of that town and the surrounding country were in a condition pitiful beyond description. They were dying of hunger and disease. Particularly bad was the plight of the little children and the old people without families. Local effort brought little result in getting homes of even the crudest sort established, for the inhabitants had absolutely nothing to work with.

Relief From America.

The combined effort of the American relief organizations soon affected a change. Orphanages and old people's homes were quickly started, with not only a decent shelter for these homeless and helpless people, but beds with blankets, and serviceable clothing to keep them in place of their verminous rags, and food to keep them sufficient quantities to keep body and soul together.

The smaller children, many of whom for the first time in their lives, get real milk to drink—condensed milk, it is true, but sweet and clean from great American canneries, and containing the nourishment that they had lacked so utterly. The aged found asylums of rest and comfort, where they might remain secure, at least past the rest of their years in escape from the nightmare of existence that had long haunted them. And there were hospitals to check the awful imports of the dreaded typhus.

Novogrodek now has its Jewish old folk's home and another for the aged and indigent Christians. Orphanages for both creeds it has likewise, and schools, too. For the first time in the history of the country children can go to school, freed at last from the merciless dominion of unfeeling Russian rule, and learn the things that the former government forbade.

Saving the Children.

Every day there may be seen a long line of children flocking toward one of the children's kitchens which were established out there by the American relief administration and the joint distribution committee, disbursing organization of the Oklahoma State Jewish relief committee. At another similar kitchen, where the food is all strictly "kosher," the Jewish children of the community are able to get nourishing American food prepared in compliance with the religious laws.

Not only through these institutions as these is American help going to the people in this desolate region. Frequent distribution trips were made to remote sections, and food and clothing given to persons whose plight was the most desperate. And through the Red Cross field unit at Novogrodek, food supplies bought and sent into the country by the Red Cross and the Jewish relief committees were given to all the needy immigrants who came and asked for help.

Novogrodek still remains desolate though, for there is practically no trade, no industry, because no raw materials can be brought into the country until transportation conditions are improved. And it is naturally true furthermore that relatively few of the people are strong enough to do a day's work. That is why undernourishment and emaciation has done to a once sturdy community.

Transformation Wonderful.

To anyone who saw Novogrodek before the American came, and saw it gradually "come back" under American treatment, the change for the better is astounding. And it is an inspiration to all those over there who are working with their resources and again will make of natural obstacles, to help Poland save her people during a critical period. For we could actually see what was being accomplished, and we knew that it was immensely worth while.

Another problem that is trying every resource of Poland and of the American relief organizations as well, is that of the refugees. Many, perhaps 2,000,000 of those who fled to Russia before the German invasion have yet to come back. And they have been living under such horrific conditions that each is a potential menace to the population of the home country.

To keep out typhus and other eastern disease plagues, and to prevent the introduction of lawless trouble-makers a cordon along the

Minister Approves of Fishing on the Sabbath if Go to Church First

SALINA, Kan., March 20.—This city possesses a preacher whom every angler in Kansas can praise.

He is the Rev. Arthur Billinger, pastor of the First Christian church—and he believes it is all right for a man to go fishing on Sunday, provided he first goes to church.

"I fail to see where we get the idea that the man or boy who goes fishing on Sunday is bound straight for the warnin' place," Billinger says. "It doesn't say so in the Good Book, and for my part I think there is not as much harm sitting on the bank of some quiet stream fishing as there is in reading the paper or reading a book or writing a letter or doing some other kind of sport in good measure for gasoline."

We have worked up a lot of useless theories about the observance of the sabbath and this idea about never going fishing or hunting or any other legitimate enjoyment on Sunday afternoons after church worship in the morning is one of them."

NEW SCIENTIST HOSPITAL

First Christian Science Convalescent Home in the West.

DENVER, March 20.—When we believe it to be true, Christian Science Convalescent Home in the West has been established here.

The institution at present has 12 rooms, and plans are under way to enlarge it at an early date.

Christian Science books and literature are available, and according to an announcement by the founders of the new convalescent home, it is open to "wherever a Christian Scientist may rest for a time and receive Christian Science treatment from his chosen practitioner."

PAYS TO TELL HER TRUTH

Pretty Co-Ed Has Power to Detect Attempted Falsehood.

MADISON, Wis., March 20.—If Marian L. Hill, pretty co-ed at the University of Wisconsin, ever acquires a husband, he'd better be careful what he tells her when he returns home after a night out. For Marian possesses the strange power of being able to tell whether a person is lying or telling the truth just by placing the tips of her fingers on the subject's nose, for that matter, or on very nearly half what the person is thinking about.

"We ought to share with women the opportunity of keeping them feminine in their methods," he says, "but this pushing and knocking one another about in crowds rushing for a seat in the car is enough to remind one that we are living in a new age."

PREACHERS TO BE HUMAN

Should Get Down Off of High Horse and Talk Plain Language.

BOSTON, March 20.—"When the minister tries to use a sermon style he will have learned to preach so that people can understand him. The minister should read the daily papers. The style they use will help him to speak to the people in a way that will demand their attention," declared Dr. Christian F. Reitner, of New York, speaking before 200 students of the Boston university school of theology.

"It is time for the church to get out and live." The time is past for ministers to wear a preacher's coat and preacher's face and manner. It is time for him to be human, to read the sporting pages and talk baseball."
